Please see the below information from our partners at the Federal School Safety Clearinghouse regarding the launch of the State Information Sharing Tool.

The Federal School Safety Clearinghouse is pleased to announce the launch of the State Information Sharing Tool, a new state-focused functionality on SchoolSafety.gov. This tool enables members of the academic community to search for state-specific school safety information and resources.

The new State Information Sharing Tool aims to:

1. Provide the academic community with a one-stop-shop for accessing state-specific school safety information;
2. Provide a streamlined and centralized tool for connecting the academic community to their respective states as well as connecting states with one another; and,
3. Enhance collaboration between state school safety leaders and the Federal School Safety Clearinghouse by establishing a sustained engagement platform.

In the months following this initial launch, the Federal School Safety Clearinghouse will continue to coordinate with states and territories across the nation to further build out this tool by adding additional state-specific school safety information and resources.

Visit SchoolSafety.gov today to view this new tool and see how it could be relevant to your community. Any questions regarding this new tool can be directed to the Federal School Safety Clearinghouse at: SchoolSafety@hq.dhs.gov.
